The Haaklandian Dragon, also known as усны шуупра (The Aquatic Tempest) was a creature, loosely related to the draconids and true dragons found in the aquatic bodies of this territory. All that is known about this creature comes from Merten's personal records, sold to a merchant after his enlightenment and recovered by Adalwulf of Aedirn in Vicovaro during his time as Grandmaster. However, the information may not be entirely reliable, given the state and reliability of Merten before his reformation.

Physiology

A draconid with 2/3rds of its body consists of its long rudder-like tail which it uses to propel itself through the water. They are pale alabaster in color except for a dark gray saddle along their spine which helps them blend in with the depths as they swim below ships observing them. A noticeable crimson-pink 'plumage' of fins takes the place that horns would be on a dragon, it also has a 'beard' of alabaster fins under its jaw. They possess heavily muscled but stubby limbs with webbed claws allowing them to maneuver through the water easily.
